

Fab John Lennon

Talk with any boy, and chances are he has a real interest in cars. And our pop star friends are certainly no exception! Brand new cars are often their first major investments, and always their special pride and joy!

THE FAB FOUR STEP ON THE GAS and NANCY LEWIS is geared up on the cars that mean so much to the most switched on pop group in showbiz ...

Can he really do it? Other Beatles and road manager Malcolm Evans look rather dubious about John's driving ability.

Well, at least he's sitting in the right place now. Looks good, too, with that grin—but he still hasn't taken off.

But John's all set now and rarin' to go. Motorists, be on the look-out. Another Beatle has just taken the wheel!

ONE thing the Beatles are certainly switched on about is cars! And to make it complete, just recently John Lennon proudly announced to the world that he had passed his driving test. So now all four of them may be spotted at different times driving on the roads.

"I'll still keep my chauffeur," John said. "For the Rolls, of course." For his own use, though, he has a Mini.

Ringo, who places fast cars high in his list of interests, is the proud owner of a maroon Facel Vega. ... Word has it that he's an excellent driver and can reach high speeds in a very short time with this new car.

George seemed to have some problems when he owned a silver E-type Jag. It was involved in a couple of minor "incidents." A lorry driver who ran into him apologized, but said the car was so low he never saw it! Hope you have better luck with that new white Aston Martin, George!

Paul also has an Aston Martin, but his is blue. Talking with FAB'S Maureen, he boasted that his car can do 140 miles an hour. "Wanna ride?" he asked her. To which Mo replied, "Don't ask silly questions!"

Ed. Unity told Paul about a ride she had with Adam Faith not too long ago. Going down the M1 in his Ford Galaxy at 110 miles an hour, something went wrong with the brakes. "The M once!" Unity said.

"I don't understand what that means but it sounds very poetic," replied Paul. "You should keep that."

"A hundred and ten miles an hour. Gosh! That's too fast to cog down," said Mo. Paul loved that expression—he kept teasing Mo about "cogging down."

After passing his test, John seemed quite anxious to show off his newly-acquired skill. Borrowing recording manager George Martin's car, he interrupted their recording session long enough to prove his ability.

"I don't think that just because I have passed my test—in my Mini—I am a good driver," he admitted. "I am still learning."

Chances are he'll be out practising as often as possible. So don't be too surprised if you spot him whizzing by some day. Be careful, though—the sight of a Beatle could be enough to distract even the most careful road user!
